

I understand this change will require the immediate unannounced observed testing of a driver when there is a negative dilute result. If the second test result is negative dilute as well, is there any repercussion? If not, why is a second test required? What is gained? Thank-you for your response. Brian Kaphaem